

Erin Webster

Biography

Erin Webster is an artist and educator from the central valley of California. Her work is inspired by her deep love of nature and explores her experience with anxiety and depression through metaphor and symbolic representation. After experiencing childbirth and postpartum depression in 2015, she began a body of work that explored her experience with visualizing emotions related to the fatigue of motherhood and the dissolution of marriage. She is currently using the medium of pen and ink and watercolor, finding it meditative and healing. Erin has both a Master's Degree and Single Subject Teaching Credential in Visual Art from Fresno State University. She is currently employed at Washington Union High School where she works as an Art Instructor and Illustration Pathway Coordinator.
