

Kati Thomson is a California native, which has informed each of her creative efforts. After a long career in healthcare, her need to tell stories has taken her from writing unpublishable novels and screenplays, some decent poetry, then to film production. Finally, she has found a home in visual art. Working mostly in oil, Kati paints a variety of subjects both from life and in her studio in Clovis, California with a focus on Figurative art.

Mostly self-taught, Kati has workshopped at Art Student's League of NY and with many well-known artists such as Arthur Gain, Mia Bergeron, Randall Sexton, Steven Assael and others. Her work has found its home in Corporate and private collections in California, Seattle, Scottsdale, AZ
